The Importance of Inbound Links For Your Site

The main priority of Search Engines is to deliver searchers the best search results possible. And they do that, in turn, for one reason only... Search Engines owe their actual customers, advertisers, the most targeted eyeballs possible.

Search Engines use several “off-page” criteria to determine “best search results.” They measure human judgment/behavior before, during and after a visitor clicks on a Search Results Page to visit a site. For example...

How long did the surfer take to return and do another search? (The longer, the better that page must have been -- everything else being equal.)

How many links from other sites go to this page and how good/relevant are those links? (The more high-quality relevant links there are to that page, the better.)

Search Engines look for relevant, timely, quality content. Why? When visitors find what they want at a specific Search Engine, they tend to come back over and over again for this type of satisfying search experience. A loyal user following contributes to the long term success of a Search Engine. (That’s how “Google” became a verb, by the way!)

As your site grows with more and more content pages, and as you get more and more quality inbound links (think of them as “votes of confidence”) and other off-page criteria, your Search Engine Ranking for each page on your site goes up. Higher positions (i.e., in the top 10) on the Search Engine Results Pages makes your site easier to find and thus increases targeted traffic.

The more times surfers see your site's listing appearing high up in the search results, the more your “brand” builds. As your brand becomes more well-known, you will become “the” authority in your niche.

As you can see, high-quality content and inbound links will get your site’s traffic rolling, like that proverbial snowball, ever-accelerating and expanding, gaining momentum as it builds and builds.

So... Get “Rolling” With The SBI! Web Site Reputation Builder Package

A site that pleases both searchers/visitors and Search Engines will attract targeted traffic organically without constantly paying for it through advertisements or by tricking the Search Engines. Often, all that is needed to boost momentum or get the “traffic snowball” rolling faster is by securing a number of quality inbound links.

On the Internet, there are many different ways to get inbound links...

- Niche-related Web sites
- Free general directories
- Paid general directories
- Theme hubs & directories (specialized directories in your niche)
- Social bookmarking
- Forum posts

- Blog comments
- Article distribution Web sites
- Question & Answer sites
- Reference Web sites

Search Engines will judge each of these areas in different ways. The key is to generate inbound links in a variety of these areas, and not rely heavily on one type of link.

And that's exactly what the SBI! Web Site Reputation Builder Package does. It will increase links to your site through a variety of sources, with the focus being on quality instead of quantity. As a result, your site benefits from a balanced range of incoming links.
